form at our local depot.

Mrs. R. Collings who has been down east some months undergoing special treatment for her complaint, returned home on Saturday morning
She was accompanied by her daughter
Louisa, also her sister.

The concert given by Miss Creighton's pupils in the L.O.O.F. Hall on Friday evening last in aid of local Red Cross Funds was a decided success everything went off in first rate style.
Miss Creighton is to be congratulated on the effort put forth, which meant hours of tiring work for her and pupils. The program which formed the second portion of the programme was something new in Crossfield and was certainly enjoyed by the large audience assembled. Miss Creighton deserves the thanks of the community for the trouble she took in training the pupils, who certainly took their part with credit to themselves and their able teacher. The local Red Cross funds were swelled to the amount of $54.25.

Frank Colliett's famous Hereford Bull Gay Lad 40th will be at the Fair.

The Working Bee called on behalf of the Agricultural Society for Monday and Tuesday this week, resulted in a large number of willing workers turning up on both days, the result of their labours will be the addition of a number of new buildings on the fair grounds. An addition to the cattle barn and covered hog pens at the north end, a number of new horse boxes opposite the old ones, also a judging ring for horses at the south of the grounds, this will save the annoyance, as in former years, of having to take the horses past the crowds of people near the entrance gates. All that is required to ensure success is fine weather, plenty of entries and the big crowd.

Don't forget to get your entries in early.

Will YOU Give 3-¹/₂ Cents a Day to Keep

A Child From Starving?

If you will, read this appeal carefully then decide what share you will take in helping avert the greatest tragedy of all time.

1,250,000 CHILDREN ARE FACING SLOW STARVATION IN BELGIUM TODAY.

The Belgian Relief Commission has not the means to supply these growing children with the food that is necessary. THE SITUATION IS SERIOUS. This great relief fund has largely been administered through Americans; the break between the States and Germany has brought about a crisis; there is more need of funds now than at any previous time.

THE GREAT RELIEF WORK MUST AND WILL GO ON.
WE MUST DO OUR SHARE.

At the present time the growing child in Belgium receives only a "hunk of bread and a bowl of soup" each day. It is not enough; they must have more—or starve.

For 3 1-3 cents a day the Relief Commission can supply one child with an extra "meal" of a biscuit made with fat or lard and a cup of cocoa, not much, but it is the difference between life and death, between health and disease, for the children of heroic Belgium.

ALBERTA HAS BEEN BLESSED WITH TWO RECORD-BREAKING CROPS.

We are prosperous—the future looks bright—we are in a position to help. How many starving children can you look after? How many will we look after?

HOW MANY WILL YOU FEED?

$12.00 a year, the price the Alberta farmer received for eight bushels of his wheat, will give this extra "meal" to one child for a whole year. 10c a day or $36.00 a year will keep three children from starvation, $60.00 a year will feed five; $120.00 a year will feed 10.

WERE YOU EVER HUNGRY?

Can you picture starvation, the pinched faces, the piteous cries?

IF THE CHILDREN WERE STARVING IN ALBERTA you would help—

YOU WILL HELP IN THIS CASE

You can't pass by the children's cry for food from starving Belgium!

AND YOU MUST ACT NOW

The thought that you are feeding some of these unfortunates each day will bring you happiness. Think of the eager little hands reaching for the meal you supply.

Your own meals will taste sweeter when you do your share. The paper in which you are reading this is doing its share by publishing this appeal without charge—WHAT WILL YOU DO?

You may send contributions by the week, month, or in one lump sum. You are ASSURED that your money is used for the purpose it is sent.

THERE ARE HUNGRY CHILDREN AWAITING YOUR DECISION. HOW MANY WILL YOU FEED?

Loss of His Famous Ring Worries Kaiser, Is Report

The Brandenburg ring is missing, if reports may be believed. And Kaiser Wilhelm is greatly worried as a result, according to some of those who profess to know. For he is a thorough believer in the legend which connects the fate of the Hohenzollern dynasty with the famed ring. Several times in the past it is reported to have disappeared, and on each occasion misfortune has befallen the House of Prussia.

It is said that Frederick the Great found the ring when he came to the throne, hidden in a strongly built case, with a memorandum written by his father as follows:

"This ring was given to me by my father on his deathbed, with the reminder that so long as it was preserved in the House of Brandenburg, this would not only prosper, but would grow and prosper."

Frederick the Great carefully guarded the ring, and although professing to care for it merely as an heirloom, some of his intimates credited him with having full confidence in its occult powers.

The ring, of little value, consisting of a gold band with a dark colored stone mounted in it, was the object of several attempts at theft during Frederick's day. When he came to die the Countess Liechtenau removed it from his hand. Frederick stirred uneasily, and said:

"Her den Ring."

"He is asking for a herring," quickly said the Countess, and those about the monarch's bedside thought the request nothing more than the vagary of a dying man.

The loss of the ring, according to the legend, resulted in the disastrous defeat of Prussia by Napoleon. The Countess, mindful of the old monarch's belief, finally yielded the ring to Frederick Wilhelm in 1813, whereupon the tide of fortune turned.

When Kaiser Wilhelm came to the throne he inherited the ring along with other jewels, and is said to have become a passionate believer in the old superstition. He has paid heed to many prophecies concerning his reign, and one report affirms that he convinced himself the stone in the ring was the eye of a toad and there fore the sign of unfulfilling fortune.

Whatever the extent of Wilhelm's belief in the Brandenburg ring, German peasants are whispering the word around that it is missing. Until the ring is found again, they say, only disaster can befall Prussia's arms. In its disappearance they see cause for all recent reverses.

WHEN MOTOR CAR RATTLES

How Best to Locate Troubles and Cure Them

There are many unpleasant noises heard when the motor car is in operation and which may be remedied without very much trouble. A hood rattle is most annoying and usually is caused by the holding down device having loose springs. There are so many different types of hood fasteners that specific instructions cannot here be given, but it will be worth the owner's trouble to investigate this small part and determine just how the fasteners can be made to hold the hood more firmly in place. Door rattles and floorboard hums are easily removed by using felt inserts and, although these soon become compressed and the noise returns, they constitute a good temporary remedy. Tools under the front seat often rattle, giving rise to the belief that some part of the car is causing it.

DOUKHOBORS THRIVE

Strange Communists Make Good as Fruit Growers in British Columbia

The Doukhobors of British Columbia who are in a sort of "get together" movement are known as "The Christian Community of Universal Brotherhood," and it is claimed for them that they live in peace and contentment which is not enjoyed by any other sect of people in the world. Mr. Verigin claims they would all have been enormously wealthy had the Dominion Government, in 1907, not cancelled the 3,000 homesteads in the Yukon district which the "community" had improved. The reason for this cancellation was because the brotherhood could not by reason of their religion, take the oaths necessary to be taken in obtaining a homestead.

The religion of the brotherhood prohibits them from partaking in war, and consequently no members ever enlisted. When they found it impossible to secure homesteads, the brotherhood decided to purchase 20,000 acres of orchard lands in British Columbia, and they have since about one-quarter of this land in a splendid state of cultivation, and have erected on it a jam factory, saw mill and other industries. About 30 car loads of fruit each year are shipped from the community.

Mr. Verigin has a proposition to have the fruits from his orchards sold on markets on the prairie which have previously been stocked with United States fruits. The crops from the Saskatchewan and Alberta brotherhood farms have been very good and the whole brotherhood is experiencing increasing prosperity.

PROTECT MIGRATORY BIRDS

At the North American Conservation Conference, held in Washington, in 1909, and attended by representatives of Canada, Newfoundland, United States and Mexico, the international problems presented by the proper protection of natural resources were clearly recognized. With regard to migratory wild life the necessity for co-operative action is especially obvious. In Canada and the United States the protection of this invaluable resource is vested in the individual provinces and states, respectively. Protective laws were extremely diverse in character and efficiency, with the result that the beneficial effects of adequate protection in one portion of the continent were largely nullified by the lack of similar measures in other sections. To secure stricter and uniform protection, negotiations between Canada and the United States were undertaken. The arrangement was satisfactorily concluded, the later ratification by the United States Senate constituting the final step. The treaty does not affect the administration of the provincial game laws, but insures in Canada, as in the United States, the minimum of protection regarded as essential to the permanent preservation of the wild life resources of North America.

The Squire's Sweetheart

—BY—
KATHARINE TYNANWARD, LOCK & CO., LIMITED
London, Melbourne, and Toronto

There was a field path that ran by the boundary hedge of the New Cottage to Linthorpe, a little village on the side of the hill. At this hour it was very lonely. The quiet fields full of dew and mystery had once been a battlefield. They said that if you dug there you might turn up a skull after the first few spadefuls of earth. It was enough to keep the rustics away from the fields after nightfall, even though there was a stile midway of the fields by which one entered a little copse, and the stile was known as the Lover's Stile, because of the many hearts and darts and entwined initials of lovers that were cut into it and on the near trees. Also in the copse was a Wishing Stone, a Druid's Altar, they learned called it, and if one sat there and wished for one's heart's desire one was bound to get it.

The roses were out in the garden, of the Old Cottage, great heavy cabbage roses, little tea-roses letting loose their scent on the night air. Syringa was heavily set in the hedges; the garden, drenched with silver dew, seemed to exhale its whole heart in the coolness after the heat of the day.

It was the night for young lovers, the Squire said to himself. If one had not grey hairs and mature pulses one might quite well lose one's head and do anything foolish on such a night.

The moon was coming up behind the hill, just showing the horn of her silver crescent. Presently she would illuminate vale and hill, but for the moment she gave little light. All was in pale obscurity, for the afterglow had not yet quite faded from the sky.

There were many sounds in the night—the hooting of owls, the whirr of the night-jar, the hum of the great bumble-bees as they blundered along, striking what ever was in their path. Suddenly a new sound came in the night—the call of a plover. Standing inside the privet hedge—the privet was almost as secret as the syringa—the Squire noticed the plover's call and wondered. How on earth did the plover come, of this well-drained upland, with its fall to the valley? There were no marshy places, no running water, such as the plover loves.

There it was again—short, sharp, insistent. Vaguely the Squire was aware that when he had walked up to the door of the New Cottage he had heard the same sound—a snapper pipe then. It was very loud for a plover. And there were no plovers there. It was someone imitating the plover, a signal of some kind; a lover's call, or perhaps one of the village boys calling to another.

While he listened the door of the Old Cottage opened, sending a long flood of light down the path between the apple trees. Dolly stood on the threshold, came out and seemed to listen, standing just beyond the little green porch. She listened, her head bent. The Squire's fingers closed on something near him. A sharp aromatic smell rose to his nostrils. It was a bush of Lad's Love. There was another name for it, he remembered. Old Man's Beard.

His pulses began to beat fast as he watched the girl all in white beyond the apple trees. She was lonely, his poor little girl, grieved and fretted. He began to wonder what she would say if he were to go to her and tell her he loved her, and ask if her golden youth could ever turn to his grey hairs?

He wondered what had put such foolishness into his head. It might have been some day in which Dolly had looked at him of late, sending him swift glances from her slumberous beautiful eyes, then veiling them with her white lids and long lashes. What had she meant by it if she had realized his forty years?

"She should never have looked at me if she meant I should not love her," muttered the Squire to himself. Poor little Mary Champneys; there would be always an altar dedicated to her white memory in his heart; but that shadowy memory had receded into the background of his life. Something warm and glowing had taken its place. A good many women had been willing and eager to make him forget Mary Champneys, and had given up in despair. And now, in the inexplicable way of love, love had come, for a girl who had looked at him from under long lashes, like a sleep-walker—a golden bee he had called her once, in an unusual flight of fancy—that was all but it had been enough to waken his sleeping heart. With the realization upon him, he felt somewhat guilty, and he remembered for the little saint whose white beauty like the moonlight had dominated his life cozily all these years.

"My dear!" he said to himself, "she would not if she could have condemned me to be wifeless, and childless, because she left me."

He started forward. He was in a mood to fling away his doubts, his doubts—to seize on the girl and woo her as she should be wooed. "My dear! my delight!" he whispered. Then there came again the call of the plover.

Dolly Egerton was listening, her hands clasped together, her head bent, something tense in her attitude, as though she was absorbed entirely in the act of listening. She drew to the door behind her. For a moment he could not see her in the darkness. The reveal her head, shadowy white going away from the house round through the little plantation at the back.

He did not think of anything but that she would return. He walked to the door, pushed it open, and found that it yielded. There was her shaded lamp, the sketching block on the table, the sketching block on the table, and another. Her hat swung by the pink ribbon from a knot of a carved chair. Amid the confusion and papers, and a sketching block on the table, a little kettle was singing on the hearth. There were two candles in a glass which must have been very near her cheek as she sat at work.

Her aura, her atmosphere, met in the quiet little room. He drew in deep breaths of delight at being there. Then he had suddenly a guilty sense. Perhaps he ought not to be there. If a village gossip claimed to see him! He knew what such people were; how easily he and Dolly would come to be discussed, spied upon, an occasion for scandal.

He glanced at the open door and the path of light down between the apple hedges. There was a white moth fluttering toward the door, a little speck of paleness on the track of light. It would burn itself on the lamp if it came in by the open door. He laid down his book on the table beside the sketching block and went out, closing the door to softly, behind him so that the moth might be safe, without touching it. He of course expected to meet her in the doorway, and was afraid of startling her. Where had she gone to, stealing into the darkness? He remembered. She had a kitten, a blue Persian, very like the one brought from the hospital, which she carried about on her shoulder, its soft, large face against her damask cheek. She had complained that the creature would wander, cared nothing for the comforts of a house, even in rainy weather.

"She is not like Keeper, who would never leave me," she had said. "She is a wild thing. I must go round the house calling her every night before she will come in from the dark garden and the fields."

Something rubbed itself gently against his legs, pulling—the kitten. He took her up and stroked her, rubbing his cheek in her soft fur as he had seen Dolly do.

Again the plover's call rang out clear and sharp. Why it was no plover! He knew for certain now that it was someone mimicking the plover, and missing the sleepy softness that would have been in the bird's call. It was a summons. All at once he knew that it was for his Dolly, and that she had gone in answer to it.

His heart turned suddenly cold. His exaltation fell dead within him. A chill race set him against some one, something, not against Dolly. What toll was she caught in, his poor little beautiful creature? What snares had been laid for her innocent feet? It came to him as he followed quickly that she was coming unwillingly. The drop of her figure, her hanging head as she listened for the call, her gliding, slow steps, as she went. What ever trust she kept she did not go to it happily. She went to it asleep. He knew now at last why she looked at him half asleep. Someone had power over her—evil power. He cried to the angels of God to protect her.

MRS. KIESO SICK SEVEN MONTHS

Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Aurora, Ill.—"For seven long months I suffered from a female trouble, with severe pains in my back and sides until I became so weak I could hardly walk from chair to chair, and I got so nervous I would jump at the slightest noise. I was entirely unfit to do my housework. I was giving up hope of ever being well, when my sister asked me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I took six bottles and today I am a healthy woman able to do my own housework. I wish every suffering woman would try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and find out for themselves how good it is."—Mrs. CARL A. KIESO, 296 North Ave., Aurora, Ill.

The great number of uncollected testimonials on file at the Pinkham Laboratory, many of which are from time to time published by permission, are proof of the value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, in the treatment of female illness.

Every suffering woman in Canada is cordially invited to write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass., for special advice. It is free, will bring you health and may save your life.

The Mosquito Peril

Danger From Disease Carriers Should be Better Known

One of the greatest discoveries in the history of medicine was that of Dr. Ronald Ross, who, at Calcutta, in July, 1898, found that the spores of malarial parasites are concentrated in the salivary gland of the mosquito. As Dr. Ross himself wrote, "The exact route of infection of this great disease, which annually slays its millions of human beings and keeps whole continents in darkness, was revealed. These minute spores enter the salivary gland of the mosquito and pass with its poisonous saliva directly into the blood of men. Never in our dreams had we imagined so wonderful a tale as this. Until lately it was not known whether a disease-spreading mosquito could infect more than one person. Recent experiments of the public health service of the United States government have proved that an infected malarial mosquito can infect several persons without again obtaining blood from an original source of infection, and that an infected mosquito retains her ability to infect with malaria at least 25 days. Even if a mosquito empties her available supply of malarial parasites into one man, she may infect a second man a few hours or a few days later through a new sensation of parasites. This is the most important discovery, for it shows that the individual disease carrier is a veritable malaria danger in point of danger, and it emphasizes the necessity for stamping out the breeding places of the malarial mosquito."

Germs in a Sneeze
Dr. Edward Martin, of Philadelphia, in a recent lecture declared that in a single cough or sneeze an influenza victim released 20,000,000 disease germs into the atmosphere of an ordinary room. Of these germs a well person might inhale 20,000 in a single breath.

Whisky and War

War is about to deliver the final knockout blow to John Barleycorn. War and whisky, it has been observed in past experience, do not mix well. War is a season for well considered judgment, clear eyes and steady nerves, for alert men in full possession of all their faculties. Intoxicating liquor is a handicap to these requisites of manhood, and therefore, in the national emergency, whisky must go.—Seattle Post-Intelligencer.

For Regenerated Belgium

Plans to Build Railroads Like Those of This Continent

Regenerated-Belgium will model some of her important railway lines on the American plan. Railway capitalists of that outraged nation have sent an agent to America to study railroad operating methods, railway shops, and, more especially, the important electric installations on trunk lines in various parts of the country. The name of this Belgian agent is Joseph Carlier. He is Assistant Professor of Railways at the University of Liege. Professor Carlier said he believed that at least $200,000,000 would be spent to place the railways of Belgium on a proper footing after the war, and that the United States would doubtless be called upon to supply a large part of the new equipment.

Mr. Carlier is also a member of the special commission which was installed in Paris last fall, the members having been appointed by the Belgian minister. The study of electrification of the Belgian railways.

"We have approximately 8,000,000 people and a little over 3,000 miles of broad gauge, and about 4,500 miles of single-track railroad. We have also a system of narrow-gauge railways, something like 1,500 miles, for small freight traffic. Our freight stations are unusually large and very large. I think we should adopt many of your ideas as to car building. I think we shall have to make compartment cars for the most part. Belgium is a windy country, and we cannot very well have long one-room cars such as you have in America, because it would be much too drafty."

CANADIAN SOLDIER'S LETTER

Says Dr. Cassell's Tablets Have kept him Fit through Two Wars

Sapper A. Hartley, of the A. Company, Canadian Engineers, whose home address is 906, Trafalgar street, London, Ontario, is one of the many who have written in praise of Dr. Cassell's Tablets. He says: "As a constant user of Dr. Cassell's Tablets, I would like to add my testimony to their value. I used them when I was in the South African War, and, limiting the benefit of the system, I have taken them since whenever I felt run-down. I always recommend them for I know that they do all that is claimed for them. In my opinion they are the best tonic anyone can take far less of appetite, poorness of the blood, or general weakness of the system."

A free sample of Dr. Cassell's Tablets will be sent to you on receipt of 5 cents for mailing and packing. Address: Harold P. Ritchie & Co., Ltd., 16, McCaul-st., Toronto.

Dr. Cassell's Tablets are the most famous remedy for Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Sleeplessness, Anemia, Nervous Exhaustion, Nerve Pain, Pale complexion, and Weakness in Children. Specially valuable for nursing mothers and during the critical periods of life. Sold by druggists and stockholders throughout Canada. Price: One tube, 50 cts; six tubes for the price of five. The Armies of Labor

Influence That Will Attract Soldiers to Farming

Love of life in the open is fostered by service on the field of battle, and this influence will attract many of the fighters of Europe to farming and the restoration of ravaged lands. The military experience will have increased the manual skill and technical efficiency of thousands of other soldiers. Modern agencies for the distribution of labor are more numerous and scientific than they were a century ago, a generation ago. We shall see the soldiers of Europe melting back into the armies of labor as did Cromwell's Ironsides in 1660 when it was said of some specially efficient and industrious worker that he was quite sure to have been "one of Oliver's men." Make the Boy a Partner

Secure His Interest in the Business Side of the Farm Work

Six per cent. of the 400 farmers who were visited in connection with an agricultural survey by the Commission of Conservation in Dundas county in 1916, were paying members of the family who assisted at home to work on the farm. No farmer was found who had taken the members of the family too active and actual partnership in the farm enterprise.

It is essential that many of our best boys remain on the farm and help in developing rural life into what it could and should be. Some of our farm boys may be better suited for occupations other than farming, but those who are suited for farming and wish to farm should be given encouragement to do so.

Boys on the farm are too often allowed to drift along with very little attention being paid to them. The boy will be more likely to become a willing worker if his interest is aroused in the business side of his work and he will gain ability to save if he is taught to spend thoughtfully and wisely. These two factors, willingness to work and ability to save, are fundamental for future success. Permit the boy to participate in the practical business transactions of the farm as the conditions allow. Let him do some of the buying and selling. When he has decided that he will be a farmer, the father may be gradually relieved from some of his responsibilities through a partnership management.—F. C. N., in Conservation.

The quiet wedding may be the only bride the storm. Sometimes a genius fools people by wearing good clothes.

Miller's Worm Powders act mildly and without injury to the child, and there can be no doubt of their deadly effect upon worms. They have been in successful use for a long time and are recognized as a leading preparation for the purpose. They have proved their power in numberless cases and have given relief to thousands of children, who, but for the good offices of this superior compound, would have continued weak and enfeebled.

Might Be Fooled

"That answer was a setback," said John G. Johnson, the lawyer, discussing a case in Washington. "It was like the answer of the man whose dying wife looked into his eyes and said, 'George, after I'm gone, do you think you'd marry again?' 'I may,' said George gloomily, 'if the trap is set different.'"—Dallas News.

A Just Tribute

The New York World would have the United States make a gift of $1,000,000,000 to France, as a proof of affection and appreciation of the aid given the colonials during the American revolution of 1776. It would be only a just tribute; for, according to a recent statement, they received $700,000,000 from France at that period, of which neither the principle nor the interest thereon was ever asked for or returned.—Hamilton Spectator.

BABY'S OWN TABLETS CURE CONSTIPATION

Childhood constipation can be promptly cured by Baby's Own Tablets. These Tablets never fail to regulate the bowels and stomach thus curing constipation, colic, indigestion and the many other minor ills of little children. Concerning them Mrs. Louis Nicole, St. Paul de Buton, Que., writes:—"My baby suffered from constipation but thanks to Baby's Own Tablets he is a fine healthy boy today. It gives me much pleasure in recommending the Tablets to other mothers." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.
